

Abstract of Taiwan's Agriculture and Environmental Conflicting Demand

Presented by

Sophia Ling

Former President of PPSEAWA Taiwan Incumbent International Vice President

The background of the slide features a soft-focus image of vibrant green leaves and two dragonflies perched on them. The dragonflies have white bodies and red abdomens. The overall color palette is a range of greens, from light to dark, with a subtle pattern of water ripples in the lower half.

people in Taiwan realize how organic planting will bring a healthy environment to the next generation

Taiwan's rural women are responsible for many important tasks in the villages

the new grange venture of Taiwan's rural women's economic power and strong vitality

Grange women devote themselves to organic agriculture and become the driving force of agriculture development in Taiwan approximately 200,000 experienced women are in charge of selecting famous “one stem, two leaves” tea in New Taipei City

A whimsical illustration of a small wooden house with a green roof and a red flower on top, surrounded by green leaves and a red path. The background is a textured, light-colored surface with a red path leading towards the house. The text is overlaid on the bottom half of the image.

Civil environment movements have enabled urban homemakers and rural women to network and cooperate the government has continued working to conciliate the conflicts by promoting organic cultivation and lower the amount of chemicals employed in the agricultural operation process you are welcome to reach me via my e-mail

Thank you for sharing the information